On GAMING.

Ah! how unjuſt to Nature and himſelf,
Is thoughtleſs, thankleſs, inconſtant Man!
Like Children babbling Nonſenſe in their Sports,
We cenſure Nature for a Span too ſhort;
That Span too ſhort we tax as tedious too;
Torture, Invention, all Expedients tire,
To laſh the ling'ring Moments into Speed,
And whirl us (happy Riddance!) from ourſelves.

YOUNG.

PASSIONS indulged to Exceſs are criminal, as Virtue turns to Vice, being miſapplied. There is a certain Bound ſet to every Paſſion, which if it exceeds, it in that Inſtant loſes its Goodneſs, and intirely defeats the End for which it was appointed. A celebrated Author tells us, that "Paſſions are the Elements of Life; by which he means, I preſume, that they conduce to our Happineſs in Proportion as they are kept under proper Regulation, and are not, as I before obſerved, permitted to exceed their proper Boundaries. Every Paſſion of the human Heart has ſome appointed Deſign; theſe vary as much as the different Diſpoſitions of Men, or according to the various Inclinations with which they are born, ſome proceed intirely from Sentiments, or rather from the Emotions of the Heart. Theſe, commonly excited by the Circumſtances of Age, Place, or Buſineſs, change and laſt but a Time; whilſt the Former, inherent to the particular Characters of each Man, generally ſubſiſt for the moſt Part as long as the Character itſelf, which indeed ſcarce admits of any Change or Alteration. There are finally, Paſſions (which are more common) remarkable rather for Sallies than Conſequences, for Fancies than Views. Theſe Paſſions come from the Mind, which well knowing the Eſteem Wit and Genius acquire in the World, would fain be thought poſſeſſed of them, and chiefly for the Reaſon of appearing with ſuperior Merit over the common Claſs of Mankind. But of all Paſſions, the moſt dangerous are thoſe that are formed in us by our predominant Inclinations, or ſuch as Cuſtom has implanted in us, which have inſinuated themſelves ſo artfully into the Contexture of thoſe born with us, that the Difference between them is not to be diſcovered without much Labour and Difficulty: For Inſtance, what vexatious and corroding Cares is the Paſſion for Riches perpetually producing in a covetous Perſon? How is the Epicurean agitated, by his Paſſion for Pleaſure? What perplexing Anxieties are excited in the lordly and ambitious Soul, by an eager Purſuit of Honours and Preferment? And what a Train of Heart-breaking Diſquietudes continually infeſt the Breaſt poſſeſſed of a Paſſion for Gaming.

Many endure more from fortuitous Cauſes, than from natural Effects, more from the Dreams of Imagination than from the real Sufferings of the Mind. Thus a Gameſter is never eaſy but when at Play; never thinks he is in the Road to Happineſs, but when reducing it to an abſolute Uncertainty whether he ſhall ever find it or not. He places SUMMUM BONUM in the Caſt of a Dye or the Turn of a Card, without conſidering the Poſſibility of either's proving his utter Ruin, and bringing him in a Moment to a State of Penury and Want.

Gaming, like Hope, is very flattering, and the deeper we involve ourſelves in it, the leſs Inclination we find to forſake it. How many fine Eſtates have been ruined by Gaming! How much Family Tranquillity deſtroyed! How many Characters blaſted, and Reputations loſt! And it is not one of the leaſt ill Conſequences of this Diverſion, that by Reaſon of its Deluſiveneſs, the Fair Sex are enabled in a ſhort Time to make a celebrated Figure in it. Hence thoſe ſhining Talents, with which many of them are endowed, and which, by a proper Cultivation, might contribute in a very eſſential Degree to the Happineſs of Mankind, are, by a continual and unremitted Application to Gaming, rendered of no Benefit to themſelves or others. The ſweeteſt Diſpoſitions have been turned ſour and moroſe by it, and the ſprightly Aſpect of Youth exchanged for the pale, ſickly Countenance of Age; the killing Brightneſs of their Eyes, and the other ſplendid Graces of their Perſons have loſt their accuſtomed Vivacity, and become in a ſhort Time dead and inattentive. In ſhort, the Decrees of Nature have, in a Manner, been inverted by it, and what we admired in the Form of an Angel, an exceſſive Fondneſs for Play, hath turned into the Appearance of a Fiend. Gaming is not only deſtructive to Individuals, but highly prejudicial to the Community in general. It frequently prevents the Diſcovery of many new Schemes that might in Time be of the greateſt Utility. If the Mind of a Gameſter ſuggeſts to him any Device for the Improvement of Arts and Sciences, his Paſſion for Play requires ſo large a Portion of his Time as to leave very little for the Purſuit of any Thing elſe; and thus of Conſequence the Thought of it ſinks into Oblivion, and Society is robbed of the Benefit that might have accrued from it. In fact, we may with great Propriety term it one of the greateſt Errors of Mankind, ſince it is the Productive of ſo many evil Conſequences to us; the Source from whence ſpring ſo many Alloys to our Happineſs, and one very great and eſſential Cauſe why Vice and Immorality reign with ſo much Rule over us.

I have heard, or ſomewhere read, of a Man whoſe Paſſion was ſo ſtrong for Gaming, that though he made many Reſolutions to refrain from it, yet whenever a Card or a Box was placed in his Sight, his Love of Play, and the great Knowledge he flattered himſelf he had of the Art, were too powerful to be reſiſte[illegible] and he was frequently led into a Train of actual Gaming, [illegible]fore he had allowed himſelf Time to conſider what he was abo[illegible] till what with one Misfortune and another, he found himſ[illegible] far reduced, as to be compelled to accept of a menial Em[illegible]ment for Exiſtence. But even in this Situation he cou[illegible] avoid Play, and was, in order to ſupport himſelf in it, [illegible] to ſeek that Aſſiſtance from Villainy which his Friend[illegible] a long Time refuſed him. This Procedure ſoon b[illegible] to his End in a wretched and ignominious Manner. [illegible] riſe to theſe Reflections, is an Obſervation I h[illegible] made, that Gaming is rather too prevalent in this [illegible], ſtrong [illegible] I flatter myſelf it is only meant as a Recreation [illegible] high, ſim[illegible] [illegible]ed with ſuch cloſe Attention as to produce an[illegible] [illegible]tive Evils above-mentioned; though I cann[illegible] were it much leſs followed than it is, and [illegible] of a more laudable and advantageous Kind, ſubſ[illegible] in its Room, that there are many who would acquieſce with me in Opinion; That Families would be more united, Happineſs more ſecure; Eſtates leſs precarious; and Arts and Induſtry more flouriſh and abound. But while every Rank in Life is poſſeſſed of an idle ridiculous Notion, that by a lucky Caſt of a Dye, or turn of a Card, their Fortunes will be made for ever, the Concluſion is inevitable, and the Conſequences very clear and obvious.

I would not however have it thought that I condemn every ceſſary to refreſh the Mind, and keep her from ſinking into Melancholy. It is the indiſcriminate continual Practice of it, I mean to diſcountenance. It is to thoſe, who ſacrifice their whole Time and Attention to Gaming, that this Eſſay is directed, and whoſe Reformation (if poſſible) I have in View.

Having thus briefly deſcribed the Nature of the Paſſions in general, and hinted at a few of the ill Conſequences of Gaming in particular, all that remains now is to point out a Cure for it.

I have always conſidered the 93d and 94th Spectators as Models of Perfection in this Reſpect, as they contain Leſſons of as great Importance to Mankind, as any other of the Works of that eminent Author. They are directly pointed at the Paſſion I am ſpeaking of, and give excellent Rules for driving it effectually from the human Mind.

I ſhall conclude, Mr. POWELL, with a Quotation out of the 94th Letter, as nothing I can offer of my own, I am certain, will have any Effect, ſhould this fail of particular Notice.

He firſt deſires his Reader to conſider how he may extend Life beyond its natural Dimenſions, by applying himſelf diligently to the Purſuit of Knowledge. "The Hours of a wiſe Man," he adds, "are lengthened by his Ideas, as thoſe of a Fool are by his Paſſions: the Time of the one is long, becauſe he does not know what to do with it; ſo is that of the other, becauſe he diſtinguiſhed every Moment of it with uſeful or amuſing Thoughts; or in other Words, becauſe the one is always wiſhing it away, and the other always enjoying it."

How different is the View of paſt Life, in the Man who is grown old in Knowledge and Wiſdom, from that of him who is grown old in Ignorance and Folly? The latter is like the Owner of a barren Country that fills his Eye with the Proſpect of naked Hills and Plains, which produce nothing either profitable or ornamental; the other beholds a beautiful and ſpacious Landſkip, divided into delightful Gardens, green Meadows, fruitful Fields, and can ſcarce caſt his Eye on a ſingle Spot of his Poſſeſſions, that is not covered with ſome beautiful Plant or Flower.

ROME, OCTOBER 24.

IT is generally believed here, that the reconciliation ſo long deſired, betwixt the Holy See and the houſe of Bourbon, is on the point of ſettlement, if not abſolutely ſettled, on the following conditions: That the Pope will aboliſh for ever the ſociety of Jeſuits, and that he ſhall grant to each Prieſt an annual penſion of 375 livres, and to the other fathers a proportionable income, upon condition that all the poſſeſſions of the Jeſuits ſhall be veſted in the Holy See: That the Pope ſhall renounce as well for himſelf as his ſucceſſors, his right, as a fief belonging to the Holy See, the duchies of Parma and Placentia, of which his Holineſs ſhall acknowledge the Infant and his ſucceſſors the legitimate, free, and independent Sovereigns; that, in the ſame manner, he ſhall renounce his claim on the cities of Ronciglione and Caſtro, which ſhall be annexed to the eſtates of the Infant Duke, and, as a compenſation, Benevento and Avignon, with their appurtenances, ſhall return under the dominion of his Holineſs.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 28.

It was the complaint yeſterday, by both parties, before they went to the Houſe, that they could not tell on which ſide to reckon Mr. Charles Fox. They are now, however, convinced, that his more than ordinary viſits of late to Holland Houſe have ſomething more in them than a filial duty.

By a letter from Paris we are informed, that the Prince of Conti has got an Orang-Outang, which our ſailors call the Wild Man of the Woods, of the largeſt ſize, being almoſt ſeven feet high, and every way proportionable. This creature walks upright, reſembles a man in every reſpect, only that he has no calves to his legs; he cannot ſpeak, but ſeems to have a ſhare of underſtanding ſuperiour to any other animal. The French nobility extol him as a wonder, and are ſo fond of him, that it is feared they will kill him with kindneſs.

TYRE, September 30. The Chiek Daher and Ali Bey are ſtill occupied in the ſiege of Jaffa, from whence they detached ſome troops upon another expedition which has proved more fortunate. They ſurprized the city of Gaza, and took a caravan, which was carrying proviſions to Naploula and Jeruſalem. The latter of theſe cities has loſt all hopes of receiving thoſe proviſions which it ſtood in great need of; and the people are reduced to ſuch great diſtreſs, that they are ready to riſe againſt the principal inhabitants and the prieſts of the Holy Land, whom they ſuppoſe to have magazines of corn and rice by them. Some time after the taking of Gaza, Zuffair Bey, who had been ſent by Ali Bey with preſents to General Orlow, returned, arrived in the camp, accompanied by four Ruſſian Officers of the corps of engineers and artillery, and with a Greek papa or prieſt. They landed alſo ſome military ſtores, together with three mortars and four cannon, which the Ruſſian General ſent to the Bey. Theſe ſuccours revived the hopes of the Bey and the Chiek Daher, who have ſince drawn nearer to the walls, and have cauſed ladders to be made, in order to give an aſſault to the city, while they ſhall batter it on the other ſide in breach.

LONDON, DECEMBER 2.

Governor Johnſtone has been thought of at times, by both parties, as a Superviſor in India, but his violent behaviour in Florida, and the known impetuoſity of his temper in general, have, by both parties, on reflection, always ſuperſeded the conſideration of his great abilities.

A correſpondent remarks, that there have been more eſtates ſold within the laſt ſix months, than had been for twelve months before.

It was one of the heavy grievances of the people, that the late King paid periodical viſits to his electorate, on the double account of the expenſion of the public treaſures out of the kingdom, and the conſequential ſtagnation of trade from the emptineſs of the metropolis; but now we are obliged to be ſatisfied with an œconomy of the moſt extraordinary and indefenſible nature, for though we hear of daily ſavings the civil liſt turns out to be inſufficient for ſupporting the dignity of the Crown, and though immenſe ſums are ſaid to be circulated, the ſubjects of Great-Britain are wholly unbenefited by them.

VIENNA, November 18. Advices from Bohemia are truely melancholy, the mortality having broke out again there, not only among the horned cattle, but among the horſes.

LONDON, DECEMBER 5.

It is ſaid that the ſeveral Companies in the City of London intend, for this year, to lay aſide their feaſts, which in ſome companies, are almoſt two in the week, and apply the money that uſed to be ſpent in guttling to the purchaſe of common neceſſaries for the Poor, and that the ſeveral Colleges in the two Univerſities, will lay aſide their gaudy days, which in ſome colleges are three in the week, and apply the ſavings in procuring food for thoſe who are ſtarving.

Doctor Hill (whoſe knowledge in botany is the admiration of all Germany as well as Engand) is ſent for, we hear, by the King of Pruſſia, to be his Majeſty's botaniſt, with a penſion of one thouſand pounds per annum during life.——This verifies the old adage, viz. That a prophet never gets honour in his own country.

Lady Huntingdon, whoſe whole delight in life is doing good, is putting on foot perhaps one of the moſt exemplary ſchemes that has yet appeared for the relief of the diſtreſſed, and has advanced a very capital ſum for that heavenly purpoſe. The ſcheme is to import wheat from the neareſt port, and to let the poor have it at firſt coſt, without any charge of freight. There are above forty gentlemen and ladies who have already ſubſcribed at her ladyſhip's inſtance.

On wedneſday evening Mrs. Manſell, wife of Mr. Manſell, ſilver poliſher in Corbet-court, was ſafely delivered of two boys; and on thurſday morning, about four o'clock, ſhe was delivered of a girl; the children and mother are likely to do well.

DECEMBER 8.

There is a talk that the Earl of Dunbar's pardon is concluded on; which, if true, will enable his Lordſhip to ſpend the remainder of his days in England. He is a man of moſt amiable character, was created Earl of Dunbar by the late Pretender, and was Private Tutor to his ſon Charles Stuart, who made the unſucceſsful expedition into England in the year 1745. Through a life of eighty years his Lordſhip has maintained his integrity unimpeached; having followed the fortunes of an exiled Prince, he was one of the few who did not baſely deſert him in the trying hour of calamity; and no proſpect of advantages could ever prevail upon Lord Dunbar to renounce his original principles. N. B. Lord Dunbar is brother to Lord Chief-Juſtice Manſfield, and now reſides at Rome.

A regulation of the public markets, in this kingdom will, we are informed, be an object of parliamentary conſideration this ſeſſion.

We are informed that the Premier conſults every day ſome of the merchants in the city, in order to acquire a certain knowledge of the preſent ſtate of proviſions, &c. in this kingdom.

Extract of a Letter from Oxford.

"The following formulary was tranſmitted by a majority of the Oxford Heads to Lord North, for his approbation, as a ſubſtitute for ſubſcription to the Thirty-nine articles in the caſe of matriculation:—I profeſs I am a ſon of the Church of England, and that I do not diſſent from the religion which is eſtabliſhed by the laws of this realm.—Alſo I engage to conform to the Worſhip and Liturgy of the Church of England, nor will be preſent at any unlawful conventicles while I remain in this Univerſity. Alſo, I will ſubmit myſelf to be inſtructed by my Tutors in the rudiments of the Engliſh Church."

Extract of a Letter from Rocheſter.

"Some gentlemen have lately eſtabliſhed a tar and pitch manufactory here, under the direction of Baron Van Haake, for which his Majeſty's royal letters patent have paſt the great ſeal.

"We are informed that this tar is of a mineral kind, and will prevent worms penetrating any ſort of wood. By order of the navy-board ſome pieces were payed with it, and nailed to the bottom of one of the men of war, at Sheerneſs, a harbour where the worms make great havock. When the Lords of the Admiralty laſt viſited that port, the pieces of wood were examined, and were found perfectly ſound, and what is ſtill more extraordinary, it has preſerved its original ſmell, though they had been laid down above fifteen months."

Paris, November 27. Strict ſearch is making after the authors and publiſhers of libels againſt the Miniſtry. Some officers of the police ſuſpecting them to be concealed in a convent, paid their viſit there accordingly, but found only one of theſe publications in the poſſeſſion of a Monk, whom they immediately ſent to the Baſtile.

LONDON, DECEMBER 10.

Yeſterday leave was given to bring in a bill for regulating the ſale and manufacture of gunpowder, in that part of Great-Britain called England.

A letter from Cheſter, dated December 1ſt, ſays, "Laſt thurſday night we had a moſt violent gale from the weſt, which occaſioned the higheſt tide known here ſince the year 1720: the Roodee and Saltney were overflowed, and many ſheep drowned by the latter. Conſiderable damage has been done to the ſhips and veſſels along the coaſt, and many lives loſt. Norman's quay at Park gate, and Gammon's warehouſe and quay, at Ince, have been carried away by the violence of the waters."

A correſpondent ſays the Miniſtry give out that the papers ſwarm with malicious reports to their prejudice; the Lord Mayor complains that reports are circulated injurious to his private character; the preſent liſt of bankrupts, the bank of Air, Fordyce, &c. &c attribute their misfortunes to the Whereas's, and articles of inſolvency, in the Gazettte and other Papers, which ſpread reports affecting their credit; but Mr. Harley has lately carried a report from a ſecret committee to the Houſe of Commons that will ruin the Eaſt-India Company, and prove the deſtruction of millions

Two of his Majeſty's ſons, we hear, will certainly be created Dukes ſoon after her Majeſty's lying in.

DECEMBER 12.

Miſs N——g, a lady of large fortune near the county town of Longford in Ireland, whoſe anceſtors had repreſented that county in Parliament, was addreſſed by ſeveral gentlemen, and among others by one Mr. J——n, who had juſt left the Univerſity, and not meeting with ſuch a return as he hoped for, took the raſh reſolution to carry off the young lady by force. An alarming attempt or two of that ſort obliged her, by way of ſafety, to go to Longford to one of her guardians, Mr. W——r, at whoſe houſe ſhe thought herſelf ſecure. But ſoon after her removal, Mr. J——n, at noon, and on the market day, accompanied by ſeventeen other men armed, entered ſuddenly into Mr. W——r's houſe, bound him faſt, ſeized on the young lady and forced her on horſeback, crying in vain for help in the midſt of ſome hundred ſpectators. When the accomplices of J——n thought the lady ſecured, one of them unbound Mr. W——r, who taking inſtantly a brace of piſtols, purſued them, and ſeeing J——n at the end of the ſtreet, fired at him and killed him on the ſpot. One of J——'s companions then preſented a piece at M——r, whoſe ſon coming up at that period with a blunderbuſs, fired it in his father's defence, and with the ſame fatal effect. The reſt, ſeeing their leaders fall, abandoned the young lady, who was under the moſt dreadful alarm, and Mr. W——r and his ſon are now under proſecution by Mr. J——n's friends, and are to take their trials at the next aſſizes.

The Pruſſians are buying a vaſt quantity of wood for building at Fordan, about two miles from Thorn; and it is ſaid they will erect a town there; large duties are raiſed on all merchandiſe ſent from Dantzick to Poland, and likewiſe on all Goods ſent from Poland to Dantzick. Money in ſpecie is forbidden to be ſent to Elbing, or other places, by any other conveyance than the poſt; and for which two-fifths per cent. of the ſum is to be paid.

DECEMBER 15.

It is ſaid that Sir George Sackville intends to bring a bill into Parliament this ſeſſions to prevent the uniting and monopolizing farms through England and Wales, being found to be greatly detrimental to the community.

The following anecdote is a fact. The factory at Dantzick, in concurrence with their principles, had agreed that every Britiſh ſhip coming into that port ſhould be aſſeſſed in a certain and proportionate ſum, in order to form a fund for the relief of ſuch Britiſh ſailors as might be reduced by ſickneſs, lameneſs, or any other accident, and for the ſupport and maintenance of the Britiſh poor: for there are ſtill at Dantzick, many deſcendants of Britiſh families, who were driven from their country during the civil wars. The produce of the fund ariſing from this voluntary contribution had often been ſufficient to enable the directors of it to extend their benevolence to the poor of other nations. By this eſtabliſhment the Britiſh Members had acquired a degree of reſpect and eſteem, which is ever of the higheſt advantage in a commercial city: and the maſters of the Britiſh veſſels have always found it eaſy to recruit their ſhip's company, if death, or illneſs, or any other accident, had deprived them of any ſailors. The ſums thus paid by the Britiſh ſhips had never been conſidered as any duty; had never been paid either to the King of Poland, or the town of Dantzick; but into the hands of truſtees, appointed by the factory, who were to apply them to this particular purpoſe. Could the King of Pruſſia pretend the ſmalleſt right to theſe ſums? Yet he has declared this voluntary contribution to be a port duty; obliges the Britiſh nation to pay it to his commiſſaries; and having thus arbitrarily and inſolently appropriated theſe ſums to his own uſe, refuſes to make good the penſions aſſigned on them for the maintenance of divers poor and diſtreſſed families.

DECEMBER 17.

Not even the dearneſs of the times, ſays a correſpondent, has been half the check to commerce and induſtry, as that ſpecies of gambling authorized by government, viz. lotteries; yet notwithſtanding the drawing of the preſent one is in no degree cloſed, we are told of a future, and it is much to be feared the ſpring trade will be greatly hurt by the deſire of individuals to throw themſelves into the way of Fortune.

Mr. Edmund Burke and Mr. Charles Fox were always better friends than the world imagined; for when a poem was preſented to Mr. Fox, above a year ago, in which Mr. Burke was treated with much ſarcaſm, he entreated the author to eraſe Mr. Burke's name, which the author reluctantly complied with, though Mr. Fox was very liberal on the occaſion.

A report is very current in the weſtern world, that the ſon of one of the moſt amiable Dukes in the kingdom, and the daughter of an unpopular Nobleman, are upon the point of re union, which gives univerſal joy to their families.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 24. This day arrived here General Pecklin, under a guard of fifty dragoons, and was delivered to the military jail, which is to be guarded with twenty-four men with drawn ſwords in their hands. On the ſame day was releaſed out of his confinement, the Chief Juſtice Engſtream, with a penſion of one thouſand dollars per annum, beſides a place at Pomerania. This Doctor had not only refuſed to ſign the new form of government to his Majeſty, but even expreſſed himſelf very warmly in the preſence of the King, after which he was confined; but at laſt he petitioned the King, that he would beg his pardon, which was granted, and a penſion alſo into the bargain. The officer who had the guard the ſame day, before the jail where the General Pecklin is confined, acquainted the General with the news, as an inſtance of his Majeſty's generous conduct; but the General made him the following anſwer: "Sir, it is more honour for me, in the eyes of a free nation, and more ſatisfaction for myſelf, to ſee myſelf thus guarded with drawn ſwords for the cauſe of liberty, public ſpirit, courage, patriotiſm, truth, and a liberal heart of thinking and ſpeaking, than to be a diſſembling penſioner at the expence and ruin of a whole nation for a trifling avarice and falſe ambition; and at the ſame time when they are ſenſible of being inſtrumental to the enormous evil, they hear the cries of conſcience in their ears, but make it ſilent, by ſaying, it is politics, a neceſſary evil; but I thank God I enjoy a perfect reſt of conſcience, and will ſtrive to ſupport it as long as I ſhall exiſt.—Should I die for it, I will call aloud with the Apoſtle, "O death, where is thy ſting! O grave, where is thy victory."

VIENNA, Nov. 25. A Poliſh Nobleman of diſtinction arrived here, the day before yeſterday, and immediately had the honour of a private audience with his Imperial Majeſty, which laſted above three hours.—And on the ſame day that Nobleman was ſecured; no body knows who he is, nor the reaſon of his impriſonment, or the cauſe of the expeditious audience on his requeſt at the very hour of his arrival.
